

The Journal of DementiaCare

For all who work with people with dementia

Vol 27 No 4 July/August 2019

Inside this issue...

■ Project updates & viewpoints

‘Somebody I used to know’ – and its impact on others living with dementia 12

Wendy Mitchell's memoir Somebody I Used to Know has been widely acclaimed, but what do Dementia Diaries reporters make of it? Philly Hare finds out

Repairing self-identity with musical autobiographies 14

Composer Nick J Jones explains how his approach to working with people with dementia goes beyond the everyday therapeutic effect of music. He composes autobiographical songs for each of the care home residents with whom he engages

The Wayback: an immersive virtual reality experience 16

An immersive virtual reality film of the 1953 coronation turned out to be a great way of sparking off conversation and reminiscence. Dan Cole explains how "The Wayback" was made

Better enabled and equipped 18

Family carers make an important contribution to the UK Dementia Congress each year. As Myra Lamont and colleagues make clear, this is about personal development rather than respite

Restoring relationships through reminiscence 19

Sally Knocker reports on the European Reminiscence Network's recent conference in Dublin

Young dementia: new film resources 20

Age-appropriate information on young onset dementia is thin on the ground, says Mandy Blair, who describes how a group of activists took matters into their own hands

This is what matters to me 21

Whiteboards are transforming the way care is provided on a Walsall hospital ward, as Aaron Bate and colleagues explain

■ Features

Developing an animated resource for children 22

When someone close to them has dementia, children can be left feeling bewildered. Helen Green and Zena Aldridge describe how Admiral Nurses developed an animated resource designed to help young children understand

Cognitive stimulation through book clubs 25

Book clubs are a great way to promote cognitive stimulation among people with dementia. Lynne Phair and colleagues are building an evidence base for their new approach in care homes and hospitals

Sexual abuse of elderly people: a problem with deep, complex and hidden roots 28

Where should the line be drawn between ordinary sexual activity and sexual abuse where a vulnerable older person is involved? Ian James, Heather Birtles and Lauren Moody set out the thinking behind their study of the dilemma

Assessing difficulties with memory and cognition 32

How do you assess difficulties with memory and cognition in an acute general hospital setting? Rachel Thompson suggests some answers, in the fourth article of our series on hospital-based dementia care

Regulars

■ Comment by Mark Ivory	5
■ News	6
■ JDC Asks	10
■ Dementia Diaries	11
■ Perspectives	13
■ Research reports	35
■ Books	37
■ Resources	37
■ Events	39